'HAIRY APE,' NEW O'NEILL PLAY, AN IMPRESSIVE STUDY OF LIFE

Is Similar to 'Emperor Jones' and Fine Specimen of Author's Work.

ROVINCETOWN THEATER—"THE HAIRY AFE," comedy of ancient and modern life, by Eugene O'Neill. tobert Smith, "Yank".....Louis Wolheim

In the days of the Society of Amerian Artists, Mr. Shaw gave an annual prize of $1,500, and since the consolidation of the two societies he has given a square hole. The dramatist has impressive study of a question which occupied Mr. O'Neill in "Beyond the Horizon," that is, the tragedy of the round peg in the square hole. The dramatist has impressive study is, the tragedy of the round peg in the square hole. The dramatist has imported in memory of his mother, known as the Julia A. Shaw Memorial Prize.

Mr. Shaw is one of the few collectors of American paintings who have never sold any of their pictures at auction. The winning of a Shaw prize is the ambition of every painter in the club. This exhibition of every painter in the club. This exhibition of oil paintings is looked upon by the members as the most important show of the club year and the two large prizes encourage the painters to send their pictures were hung this year and they fill the large gallery and overrun the big front room known as the Lounge.

The exhibition opened March 4 with a reception and tea and continues until March 18, Sundays excepted.

hairy ape. The unhappiness and decline of a giant in body without experience of the world or the mental powers to understand its views are graphically drawn. The playwright follows the dramatic form of "Emperor Jones," although there is not the richness of imagery or analysis of character to be found in the first play. It was a much more exciting game to see the negro usurper beaten by fate. He was a clever rascal in his way. The hairy ape is only a feeble glant who is bowled over by the first blow of fate.

PONSELLE'S CONCERT IN HOME CITY OFF

Meriden, Conn., Objects to Sunday Event. MERIDEN, Conn., March 9 .- The pro-

MERIDEN, Conn., March 9.—The proposed concert by Misa Rosa Ponselle, Metropolitan Opera prima donna, planned for Easter Sunday afternoon by the Veterans of Foreign Wars in her home city, was indefinitely postponed at a meeting of the post to-night. The concert has been the subject of a bitter controversy here for over a week. When the veterans called on the Mayor and the Prosecuting Attorney for their opinions as to conducting a Sunday concert the officials said they would take no action unless forced to do so by the Ministers Association, which promptly entered its objection to a violation of the State laws.

The veterans went ahead with their plans, insisting that the concert would be held and the matter brought to a test, but finally came to a decision to call the affair off for the best interests of all concerned.
